

After receiving her PhD in Condensed Matter Physics, Dr. Chasteen has spent her career focused on physics education through positions at National Public Radio, the Exploratorium Museum of Science in San Francisco, and the Science Education Initiative at the University of Colorado. The later part of her career was spent as an external evaluator and writer, working as an independent consultant in her company Chasteen Educational Consulting. She currently lives near Boulder, Colorado with her son and two cats.